DOMED LID

Unique ID: MAS-D100087

Object type certainty: Certain Workflow status: Published

One ceramic serving dish lid made of a refined whiteware with transfer-printed design in red. The term 'whiteware' is used in historical archaeology to denote refined ceramics with a whiter and denser body than pearlware that generally postdates c. 1830. Whiteware is a class of ceramic products that include porcelain and china. They are usually, but not necessarily white and consist typically of clays, feldspar, potter's flint, and whiting (calcium carbonate).

Notes:

This item was found with three cylindrical glass bottles ($\underline{MAS-D100084}$), seven clay pipes ($\underline{MAS-D100085}$) and two green glass gin bottles ($\underline{MAS-D100101}$).
